I think this case should end immediately. All citizens have benefitted from Microsoft products. Bill Gates is brilliant and surrounds himself with brilliant people and has done nothing wrong. We only wish we were as smart. To force Microsoft to house a Tech Committee to enforce his compliance with the settlement and then demand he fund it is insane. In America we are suppose to be able to succeed without government punishment for doing well. The government should never have been involved in the first place. CEO s of competitors have thrown money in the right place to bring about this suit in the first place. That is obvious to everyone. To even entertain a forced breakup of Microsoft just simply isn t the American way. Someone somewhere forgot that theory. Maybe the competitors should do better work instead of trying to bring down those that are smarter than them. This is just the opinion of a simple public high school teacher who only wishes to have been so brilliant. Leave Microsoft alone.
